About

The Australian Horse Industry Research and Development Trust (AHIRDRT) is an Ancillary Fund with Deductible Gift Recipient (DGR) status established by Horse SA.

The purpose is to promote, support and share information with horse owners in areas related to horse health care and welfare, sports science and environmental management.

A strong partnership has been formed with the University of Adelaide, assisting in establishing a national centre for horse care, health and welfare programs research and extension with specialised training for equine professionals and public education for horse owners. Community and industry engagement in research and sharing of knowledge is strongly promoted.

Members of the Trust's advisory board represent different aspects of the horse industry and community. The members serve as valuable links between South Australia and Australia's horse related interests, the Trust programs, lead community giving initiatives and help to promote broader horse health and welfare outcomes.

The Trust welcomes support and collaboration from other like minded organisations and individuals from around Australia and internationally.

The Story

Our horses are our story – cemented in the culture and history of this nation. They are important to us for companionship, therapy, work, sport, recreation, breeding and more.

Our values determine that the care and well-being of all horses is important to us; that we always question, recognise and affirm how we care for horses and we endeavour to engage, share information and support our community to ensure the wellbeing of all horses and people who care for them is paramount.
